

LETTER OF ATTENDANCE

This letter confirms that:

Laetitia Sullivan

attended the online workshop titled:

"Will AI autocorrupt me out of a job?"

A real talk for real translators and editors held on Friday, 25 July 2025, from 09:00 to 11:00 (SAST), with an optional Q&A session until 12:00, hosted via Zoom.

This 2-hour interactive session offered candid insights into the shifting realities of freelance translation and editing in the age of AI. It provided a space for participants to:

- Explore industry trends and post-editing challenges
- Share concerns and personal experiences
- Discuss boundaries and sustainable practices

Topics included the rise of AI-generated content and its growing use in translation and editorial workflows, the gap between agency promises and on-the-ground realities, and the increasing demand for high-speed post-editing at reduced rates. Particular emphasis was placed on how these shifts affect editors, especially in terms of scope creep, quality expectations and maintaining professional integrity in a fast-changing landscape.

We thank you for your participation and contribution to the conversation.

Sincerely,

Michelle Rabie
